Mississippi Joe Callicott Marker

Joe Callicott was a Nesbit native and blues musician who began to gain popularity in the 1920s and 1930s. “Cottonfield Blues,” a song he recorded with long-time friend and fellow performer Garfield Akers, is a fan favorite and has been covered many times by other artists. In the 1940s, Callicott gave up performing, only to return in the late 1960s. His first performance after the hiatus was at the Memphis Country Blues Festival. Mississippi Joe Callicott sang songs about everything from World War I to Beale Street. Callicott was a mentor to Nesbit guitarist Kenny Brown who later became popular in the blues scene. His marker is part of the Mississippi Blues Trail.

CULTURE AND CHARM

WAS CULTIVATED

BY ALL WHO CAME

BEFORE US.

Mississippi Freedom Trail

The Mississippi Freedom Trail was created in 2011 to commemorate the people and places that played a pivotal role in the American Civil Rights Movement. It is our honor to have the March Against Fear marker in Hernando to shine a light on Civil Rights activist James Meredith's courageous acts.

Mississippi Blues Trail

Did you know DeSoto County is one of the birthplaces of the blues? To honor the talented musicians who spent significant time in the Magnolia State, the Mississippi Blues Commission created the Mississippi Blues Trail in 2006. The trail is a sprawling collection of markers dedicated to the artists who contributed greatly to the genre. It stretches across the state, with each marker giving a synopsis of the musicians' contributions to the blues. We're proud to have five of these markers around the county.

Mississippi Country Music Trail

Country music has deep roots here in Mississippi, and one legendary star calls DeSoto County home. Does "goodness gracious great balls of fire!" ring a bell? Jerry Lee Lewis spent many years in Nesbit at his home referred to as The Lewis Ranch, and now lives elsewhere in DeSoto County.

DeSoto County Museum

Artifacts and memorabilia in the main building, and a restored log cabin built in the 1840s used for educational opportunities make up this DeSoto County attraction. The DeSoto County Museum packs learning and entertainment opportunities for visitors of all ages. Admission is free and exhibits rotate throughout the year, making it a great place to visit time and time again.
